School inspections

A guide for parents

This document applies to all maintained schools, including special schools and pupil referral units. It also covers academies, city technology colleges, city colleges for the technology of the arts and some non-maintained special schools in England.

Why does Ofsted inspect schools?

We inspect schools to provide information to parents, to promote improvement and to hold schools to account for the public money they receive. School inspections are required by law. We provide an independent assessment of the quality and standards of education in schools, and check whether pupils are achieving as much as they can.

Who inspects schools?

His Majesty's Inspectors and Ofsted Inspectors (who in most cases are serving school leaders who inspect for Ofsted for an agreed number of days each year) carry out the inspections. All inspectors have been trained to, and assessed against, Ofsted's standards.

When do inspections happen?

Until September 2024, graded inspections of schools included an overall effectiveness grade, in addition to the key judgements, and any provision judgements. Overall effectiveness grades given before September 2024 will continue to be visible on schools' inspection reports and on Ofsted's website. We will continue to inspect these schools in the timescales set out below.

From September 2024, graded inspections will not include an overall effectiveness grade. Schools inspected from then will not have the same way of working out when to expect their next inspection. We will set out the expected dates when we will next inspect them from September 2025. These schools should not expect to receive an ungraded or graded inspection before this (but could receive an urgent or monitoring inspection, which could be deemed a graded inspection).

A graded inspection is carried out under section 5 of the Education Act 2005 (the Act). Schools judged good or outstanding for overall effectiveness during a graded inspection before September 2024 will usually be inspected about once every 4 years to confirm whether the school has taken effective action to maintain the standards identified at the previous inspection. This is called an ungraded inspection, and it is carried out under section 8 of the Act. Ofsted does not give key or provision graded judgements on an ungraded inspection, but if we find some evidence that the school's work has improved significantly, or that it may not be as strong as it was at the last inspection, the next inspection will be a graded inspection. Usually, this is within 1 to 2 years of the date of the ungraded inspection, but if we have serious concerns about a school, for example in relation to safeguarding, we will deem the ungraded inspection a graded inspection immediately.

Although most schools judged good or outstanding for overall effectiveness before September 2024 will be inspected as outlined above, some of these schools will automatically receive a graded inspection instead of an ungraded inspection if our risk assessment process indicates that the quality of provision in the school may have deteriorated significantly, or if a school has undergone significant change, such as in its age range.

A school judged requires improvement or inadequate for overall effectiveness at its last inspection before September 2024 will usually be inspected again within 2.5 years. If a school meets Ofsted's monitoring threshold as set out in the school inspection handbook it will be eligible for routine monitoring from inspectors to check its progress (as set out in the monitoring inspection handbook) and is inspected again within a period of 2.5 years.

Schools judged outstanding for overall effectiveness prior to September 2024 that were formerly exempt from routine inspections

Between 15 May 2012 and 13 November 2020, maintained primary and secondary schools and academies judged to be outstanding in their overall effectiveness at their most recent graded inspection were exempt from routine inspections. These schools are now once again subject to routine inspections. This also applies to academy converter schools that were formerly exempt because the overall effectiveness of their predecessor school was outstanding at its most recent graded inspection.[1]

All formerly exempt schools will receive an initial graded or ungraded inspection by July 2025. Those schools that received their last graded inspection before September 2015 will receive an initial graded inspection. Those that received their last graded inspection after this date will normally receive an initial ungraded inspection. If that ungraded inspection indicates that aspects of the school's work may not be as strong as at the time of the previous inspection, we will normally carry out a graded inspection within the next 12 months or as soon as possible thereafter and, in any event, before 1 August 2026. Beyond these initial inspections, future inspections for these schools will take place as set out in the section above and the school inspection handbook.

How long do inspections last?

A graded inspection normally lasts 2 days. However, ungraded inspections of primary schools or maintained nursery schools with fewer than 150 pupils normally last for 1 day. The number of inspectors on the inspection team will vary according to the size and nature of the school.

What judgements do inspectors make on a graded inspection?

Inspectors will make graded judgements on the 4 key judgements:

- the quality of education

[1] Academy converter schools are schools that have been approved by the Secretary of State to convert to become an academy.

- behaviour and attitudes
- personal development
- leadership and management.

When applicable, inspectors will also make a graded judgement on the effectiveness of the early years or sixth-form provision in the school.

Until September 2024, graded inspections of schools included an overall effectiveness grade, in addition to the above key judgements, and any provision judgements. Overall effectiveness grades given before September 2024 will continue to be visible on school inspection reports and on Ofsted's website. From September 2024, graded inspections will not include an overall effectiveness grade.

Inspectors use the following four-point scale to make all judgements:

- outstanding
- good
- requires improvement
- inadequate.

The school must take all reasonable steps to make sure that parents of pupils at the school receive a copy of the inspection report.

What happens if Ofsted judges any of a school's key judgements to be inadequate, and/or safeguarding is judged to be ineffective?

If inspectors judge any of the key judgements to be inadequate, and/or safeguarding is judged to be ineffective, it will be placed in one of the following 2 categories of concern.

- special measures – this means the school is both:
  - failing to provide its pupils with an acceptable standard of education
  - not showing the capacity to make the improvements needed.
- serious weaknesses – this means that the school's performance requires significant improvement but meets only one, or neither, of the conditions for special measures. A school with serious weaknesses will have one or more of the key judgements graded inadequate, and/or safeguarding judged to be ineffective, and/or have important weaknesses in the provision for pupils' spiritual, moral, social and cultural development.

A maintained school or pupil referral unit placed in a category of concern will be issued with an academy order by the Secretary of State for Education, to require it to become a new sponsored academy or an alternative provision sponsored academy.[2] Inspectors will not normally monitor the school unless there are concerns or there is a delay in the school becoming a sponsored academy.

For academies, maintained nursery schools and non-maintained special schools that are placed in a category of concern, inspectors will visit these schools to check on their progress until they can be removed from the category (unless, for academies, they are re-brokered with a new sponsor to become a new sponsored academy). Ofsted will normally re-inspect these schools within 2.5 years of the publication of the inspection report that placed them in a category of concern.

How much notice do you give to a school before you inspect?

Most schools receive notice of their graded or ungraded inspection after 9:30am on a Monday morning. Schools may be notified of an urgent or monitoring inspection on any day. If a school has been notified of an inspection that is subsequently deferred, we can notify that school of the new inspection date on any day of the week. If a school is open in a week that includes a bank holiday, we may notify the school on the Tuesday of that week.

However, Ofsted can inspect any school without notice where this is judged to be appropriate.

What happens during an inspection?

Inspectors talk to the headteacher and other school leaders who are responsible for making decisions about how the school operates (for example on curriculum and behaviour), governors, staff and pupils. They also consider your views as a parent.

If the school is an academy, they also talk to any trust leaders who have a role in running the school, including the chief executive officer and executive headteachers or directors of education (where applicable). They also talk to trustees. They spend most of their time observing a wide range of lessons and looking at the quality of education in the school, and the impact of the curriculum. Inspectors give specific attention to the acquisition of knowledge, understanding and skills in lessons.

They also look at the personal development, behaviour, attitudes and welfare of pupils at the school, the promotion of spiritual, moral, social and cultural development; and how well the school is led and managed.

For information about the inspection of boarding or residential provision in schools, you should refer to the guidance for schools on being inspected as a boarding or residential school.

[2] Maintained nursery schools and non-maintained special schools placed in a category of concern are not subject to academy orders.

Inspection and the COVID-19 pandemic

Our approach to inspection will take into account the COVID-19 pandemic and the disruption it has caused to schools. Inspectors will discuss the impact of the pandemic with the school, including how the school leadership responded to the situation, and will take that into account in their assessment of the school.

Schools that were last inspected before the start of the pandemic may receive their first routine inspection up to 2 years later than they would have previously. This is due to the suspension of routine inspection activity as a result of COVID-19.

How can I make my views known?

If you are the registered parent of a child at the school, the school will send you a letter notifying you of the dates of the inspection. This letter provides you with details and options for providing your views. Our survey site, Ofsted Parent View, is the main source we use to gather parents' views about a school. Inspectors will use the views expressed on Ofsted Parent View when inspecting your child's school.

Can I speak to the inspectors?

You may have the chance to speak to the inspectors during the inspection, for example at the start of the school day. The inspection administrators will be happy to pass on messages to the inspectors and may be able to arrange telephone conversations if you are unable to speak to them in person. Their contact details will be in the letter that tells you about the inspection. Please remember that inspectors cannot deal with complaints concerning individual pupils or settle disputes between you and the school.

What happens after the inspection?

The lead inspector reports their judgements to the headteacher and governors. The inspection findings are published in a report for the school, parents and the wider community. Inspection reports provide information about the effectiveness of the school's work and contain recommendations about what the school should do to improve further. Reports are published on our reports website.

Where can further details be found about school inspections?

The education inspection framework sets out the principles that apply to inspection and the main judgements that inspectors make when carrying out inspections.

The school inspection handbook and school monitoring handbook set out the statutory basis for inspections, what schools can expect at inspections and provide guidance for inspectors on making their judgements.

What happens if I have concerns about the inspection?

Complaints are rare, but we treat them very seriously. You can find out more about our complaints procedure on our website or by calling our helpline on 0300 123 4666.

If you need any more information about our work, please visit Ofsted on Gov.UK or call our helpline.

What happens if I have concerns about my child's school?

If you are concerned about your child's school, you should start by talking directly to the teachers or headteacher or, if necessary, the governing body or the local authority/academy trust. Find out how to Complain about a school.

Gathering personal information on inspection

Inspectors will gather any personal information necessary to assist them in inspecting a school. Ofsted's privacy policy sets out what personal information we collect, what we do with it, how long we keep it and individuals' rights under data protection legislation.

The Office for Standards in Education, Children's Services and Skills (Ofsted) regulates and inspects to achieve excellence in the care of children and young people, and in education and skills for learners of all ages. It regulates and inspects childcare and children's social care, and inspects the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service (Cafcass), schools, colleges, initial teacher training, further education and skills, adult and community learning, and education and training in prisons and other secure establishments. It assesses council children's services, and inspects services for looked after children, safeguarding and child protection.
